

Original Work

11/27/2017- 12/3/2017

This week in ISM was an extremely productive week. I did a great job with staying on task, managing my time and being proactive. I turned in my interview assessment on Tuesday, revised original work proposal on Wednesday and my Research Showcase invitation on Thursday. This was my best week, as far as time management.

Moving on, this week I had a talk with Mr. Spiece and he informed me that my original work idea, creating a NFL terminology dictionary, was weak and that I should think of something else that would be more beneficial for my future. He suggested that I change my original work to filming videos of myself sideline reporting and compile them on my digital portfolio. I have taken Mr. Spiece's advice into consideration and I will be creating a reel and uploading my content on my digital portfolio and YouTube channel, BriTV. As I get going with my original work, I will need to conduct some more interviews with business professionals and local athletic staff in FISD in order to gain knowledge and permission to speak with players.

Prior to Thanksgiving break, I conducted an e-mail interview with Mrs. Lindsey Draper. Originally we were going to have a phone interview, however, due to her busy schedule she was unavailable. The information that she provided me with was extremely helpful and I will be typing up my interview assessment for Mrs. Draper next week.

Finally, I emailed my mentor Ms. Tasha Wells today to inform her about the upcoming Research Showcase happening in January, as well as, to figure out our weekly schedule for mentor visits. I am very thankful for Ms. Well's willingness to help me and I am very excited to learn and build a great, professional, relationship with her.
